Judith Collins Living

ANGELA FOWLER

Down where the gulls dance driftwood lying drying for the fire, Yellow beak and sleek now the gulls are crying, flying higher,
Out of the sea came a little green crab, taking the sun the morning very drab,
Old rusty cans, pebbles bedded in the sand stand and stare.

"The vital aspires through struggles, the mind through self search, and the heart aspires through the feeling of union."

Sri Chinmoy

It is through that union, both intimate and communal,
that we have reached an understanding of trust, dependence and aspiration.

Aspiration is the only remedy for hearts troubled with impatience.

We are truly fortunate in attaining or in the least observing this experience early in our lives.

In this world, geared for making it alone and for the self made man or woman, the opportunity for living happily with others not of your own choosing or state of mind will seldom arise again.

If it does, may our memories not fail us in relighting the fire of experience and in feeling the warmth of accomplishment that our current union has revealed to us.
